LEARNING BEGINS 'BETWEEN THE WATERS' 4 UNIVERSITIES CONDUCT RESEARCH AT HOBCAW BARONY

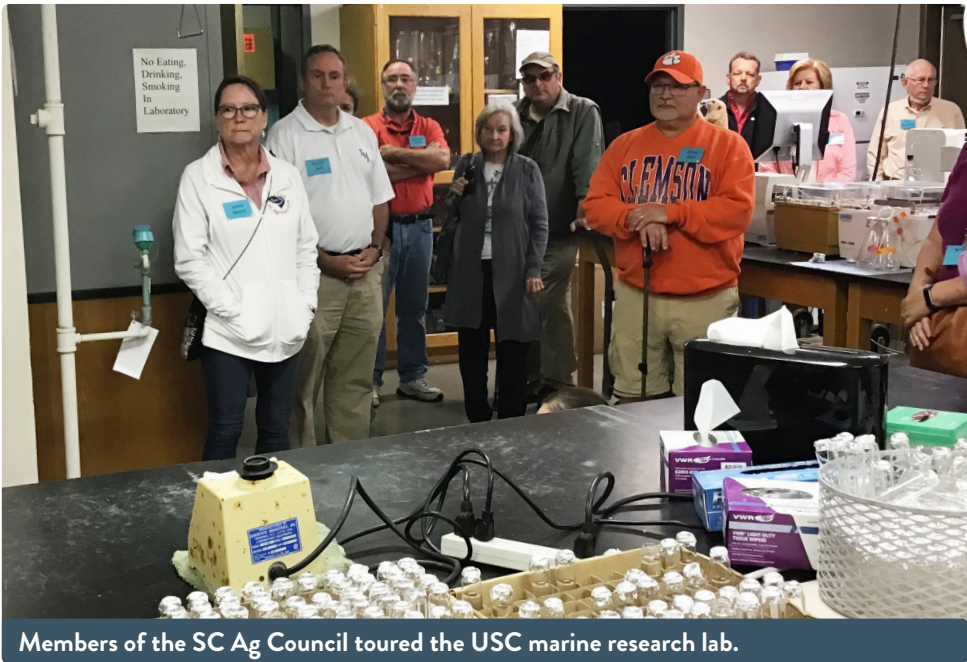

STORY & PHOTOS BY MARSHA HEWITT

Hobcaw Barony is one of the state's most precious resources. With 16,000 acres of undeveloped maritime forest, its ecosystem impacts the entire East Coast. Hobcaw is owned by a private foundation created by former owner Belle Baruch. In her will, she mandated that the property be used for research in forestry, marine biology, and wildlife.

Four universities are sharing this bountiful preserve. The University of South Carolina, Coastal Carolina, Clemson, and Francis Marion University have separate research institutes. The Clemson partnership is 50 years old, while USC has been there for 49 years. Francis Marion and Coastal Carolina are relative newcomers to the preserve, having become partners in 2017.

The South Carolina Agricultural Council toured Hobcaw recently. Most of the group had not visited the research center, and they were treated to tours of both the USC and Clemson labs in addition to Hobcaw House. Executive director George preserve. His family typically spent their winters in Georgetown and traveled back to New York in the spring. Baruch's oldest daughter, Belle, loved the plantation on the coast. An unusual woman, Belle was an avid hunter, equestrian, sailor and pilot. She kept a string of show horses in France, where she competed internationally. A trophy case in the main house at Hobcaw is filled with Belle's show jumping and sailing trophies.

Members of the SC Ag Council toured the USC marine research lab.

Dr. Skip Van Bloem regularly gives outdoor lectures at Clemson's coastal ecology lab.

Chastain gave an interesting overview of the impressive maritime preserve, which was originally 11 different plantations.

The bulk of the property was acquired by Bernard Baruch in 1905 as a hunting

In the late 1930s, Baruch persuaded Belle to move back to the United States by offering to sell part of the plantation to her. She designed Bellefield as her personal residence, built a stable for her horses, moved her trainer from France, and took over the management of the property.

Over the next few decades Belle created a foundation that would preserve the plantation and make it possible for students and scientists to study the

WISHING YOU AN AGRICULTURAL CHRISTMAS

I looked at the calendar last week and thought "that can't be right, it's almost Christmas!" Whoa, seemed like yesterday was Labor Day. Maybe it's an age thing or maybe it's the pace we seem to keep in our daily lives. Christmas seems to come faster and start earlier as years go by. By the way, I don't listen to Christmas music before Thanksgiving.

It seems that the agricultural message of Christmas seems to be more and more lost in the clutter of the messages bombarding us. Let's take a step back and think about how there should be no other time of the year more than Christmas when celebrations should revolve strongly around U.S. agriculture.

It is well known that most Americans are several generations removed from the farms or ranches across our country. With that there is probably a common misconception that Americans are not appreciative. I do believe that there is an appreciation that U.S. agriculture produces the greatest selection of affordable food found anywhere in the world. Whether they realize that the percentage of their income spent on food in the U.S. is less than half the next lowest country in the world is unsure.

What Americans might not consider is what goes into growing the cotton or wool for clothing or the wide variety of uses of agricultural commodities that farmers produce. Many don't know that agricultural commodities go beyond the food on our tables — that they can go into plastics, housewares, buttons, electronics, personal and industrial products, and numerous other products used daily or given as holiday gifts.

Corn has more in common with Christmas than most think. Corn can also be processed into a variety of foods and industrial products, including sweeteners and fuel ethanol. Roughly 40 percent of corn produced in the U.S. is used in fuel ethanol. Remember that when you are traveling to visit friends and family during the holiday season. I know there can be issues with ethanol in small or marine engines, but looking at the comparison of gasoline prices with or without ethanol should make most drivers appreciate our corn growers.

Cotton produced in South Carolina is used to make everything from the clothes we wear to the stockings that we hang on our chimneys with care. In addition, it probably makes for a lot of Christmas family pictures as well because there's nothing better as a backdrop than a beautiful field of cotton or a big pile of cotton. We did it 20-something years ago when our boys were young.

Dairy is another tremendous commodity to use during the holidays. The typical dairy cow produces about 6 1/2 gallons of milk each day. That is a lot of dairy that can be used to make eggnog, custard, pies, cakes and other holiday favorites. Furthermore, Santa is expected to consume nearly 137 million gallons worth of dairy products on Christmas Eve!

Nearly 25 to 30 million real trees are sold per year showing how Christmas tree production plays a role in the holidays. Each year Americans spend nearly $7 billion on wrapping paper coming from our timber growers to wrap presents for ones they hold near and dear. If everyone wrapped packages like me, that number would definitely go up. Finally is the value of the agricultural image portrayed in numerous media. A very important idea in the agricultural message is its image of integrity and hard work—that America still values the dedication of farm families to maintain a way of life and supply our country with so many essentials. That appreciation for the average American is probably at peak around Christmas.

For those of us who know, it's not just at Christmas when we appreciate our farmers.

undisturbed ecosystem. Dr. Matt Kimball, assistant director of USC’s marine field lab, explained that Winyah Bay is the third largest estuary on the East Coast. North Inlet on the east side of Hobcaw Barony is undeveloped and undisturbed, making it is one of the most important watersheds in the world. The university keeps tabs on about 70 projects a year, from monitoring water quality to studying the salinity of the water.

Hurricane Hugo destroyed the old lab in 1989, but a state-of-the-art structure overlooking the marsh is the ideal environment for researchers from around the world.

Dr. Matt Kimball oversees the tarpon nursery at USC marine field lab.

“It’s like a little campus in the woods,” Dr. Kimball said. Scientists from as far away as China make repeated trips to the lab to study the environment.

One project studies tarpon, a species of fish not known to frequent South Carolina waters. They are prolific off the coast of Georgetown, and the lab has established a tarpon nursery to monitor this popular sport fish, from fingerling size to about 18 inches.

The Clemson lab has a different focus. The Institute of Coastal Ecology and Forest Science concentrates on three research thrusts: wildlife, forestry, and fresh water quality. For example, alligators are good sentinels for water quality, and the marsh is an established habitat for migratory waterfowl.

“We focus on what we’re best at,” said Dr. Skip Van Bloem, director of the Baruch Institute for Coastal Ecology and Forest Science at Clemson. He joked that “This is the place where USC and Clemson get along the best.” Each university has its own research lab with specific areas of study.

The newest institute, developed by Francis Marion University and Coastal Carolina, focuses on archaeology, anthropology, and historical research. One project is reestablishing longleaf pine, which used to be the dominant tree in the Southeast. The former 90 million acres have been logged down to 3 million, and the Baruch Foundation is managing the property for longleaf. As a bonus, the endangered red cockaded woodpecker nests in living pine trees, and the 23 woodpecker families are closely monitored.

“We manage the property for research and also for income,” Chastain said, explaining that the centuries-old practice of prescribed burning is good for the forest and for wildlife.

Over the past few decades, researchers from 52 colleges across the United States have studied the unique ecology and history of the land. Scholars from as far away as China make regular visits to Hobcaw to expand their research of the eco-system.

FOUNDATION MAKES HOBCAW AVAILABLE TO RESEARCHERS FROM ALL OVER THE WORLD

As people and businesses move to South Carolina’s coast, more natural lands are being converted to urban uses. Scientists at the Baruch Institute have studied the coastal environment for more than 50 years, including the environmental impact of changing land-use patterns, coastal natural resource conservation, forestry, water quality and watershed management.

The research provides information to help decision-makers manage growth so the state’s coastal environment can be preserved for future generations.

The trustees of the foundation have entered long-term research agreements with the University of South Carolina, Clemson University, Coastal Carolina University and Francis Marion University to create permanent research institutes.

Hobcaw Barony offers research opportunities for faculty and students in an ecological reserve of forests, high-salinity marsh estuaries, and brackish and freshwater marshes

Fifty years ago, the Clemson University Belle W. Baruch Institute of Coastal Ecology and Forest Science was established “to conduct research and education programs focused on the ecology and management of the natural resources of the coastal region of South Carolina for the betterment of the state’s citizens.”

The mission of the University of South Carolina Belle W. Baruch Institute for Marine Biology and Coastal Sciences is “to conduct research and support education to improve the management of marine and coastal resources and advance basic science for the well-being of people and their environment.” The Institution has maintained the Baruch Marine Field Laboratory since 1972.

Francis Marion and Coastal Carolina’s Belle W. Baruch Institute for South Carolina Studies is “to engage in the study and research of the cultural, historical, and archaeological heritage of South Carolina.”

WOMEN IN AG IS NEW TOPIC FOR 2019 AGRIBIZ EXPO

FLORENCE – Once again at the next SC AgriBiz & Farm Expo, women engaged in agriculture will experience outstanding programs and opportunities to expand their knowledge.

The Women’s Track will begin Wednesday, Jan. 23, at the opening session, which will be led by Michele Payn of Cause Matters Corporation. Michele has worked with farmers in more than 25 countries and understands the ag journey and challenges. She is known for being a passionate advocate of agriculture and the total agrifood system.

The speaker will lead two informative, beneficial sessions: “Celebrating Agriculture” and “Championing Agriculture,” in which she helps women learn how to develop a personal farm story and demonstrate their passion for farming.

During Wednesday’s lunch, Jan Nirri, the owner of Success Factor Consultants, will share “Online Marketing: What You Thought You Knew.” Jan is a graduate of both Annie’s Project and SC New and Beginning Farmers. Her engaging workshop will share the best ways for marketing individual businesses and how to get the most out of the many marketing tools utilized today.

Later on Wednesday afternoon, Michele Payn will return to bring a program especially targeting women on the farm, “Farm Like a Girl.” This presentation will be fun, informative and beneficial to help grow any farming operation.

On Thursday, Jan. 24, the Women’s Track will include “Sowing the Seeds for Tax Reform Change” and “Tractor 101.” Rachel Nightengale of Dixon Hughes LLC will share information regarding the new tax reform bill, which includes the most significant changes to the tax code in the past 30 years.

Tractor 101, developed and presented by experts at Clemson Extension, will be a hands-on workshop. Attendees will learn the basics of running and maintaining a tractor safely.

“As you can see, great programming has been developed and is available –free–for your benefit,” said expo executive director Jody Martin. “We thank the sponsors for supporting the Expo and making the two-day showcase an event for all to attend.”

He encouraged everyone interested in agriculture to save the date and bring others to enjoy all things agriculture at the seventh annual expo, Jan. 23 and 24 at the newly renovated Florence Center.

For more information, visit scagribizexpo.com.

PEANUT HARVESTING

Peanuts are being harvested across the state. The SC Peanut Board is hopeful this crop will be a great one. Farmers are harvesting between 3,700 and 4,200 pounds per acre. Prices are about $4.25 for Virginia peanuts and around $3.55 for runner style nuts.

Digging peanuts is the first step.

Neat rows of peanuts in Calhoun County are the result of proper combining.

S.C. 4-H'ERS GIVE PRESENTATION AT REGIONAL LEADERSHIP CONFERENCE

Six youth leaders from South Carolina 4-H shared their leadership skills at a multi-state conference created to bring together teens and adults to make a positive change across the South.

The 14th annual Southern Region 4-H Teen Leadership Conference took place Sept. 20-23 in Crossville, Tenn. South Carolina 4-H'ers who participated were: Garret Ulmer (Colleton County), S.C. 4-H State Teen Council president; Andrea Habersham (Jasper County), S.C. 4-H State Teen Council vice president; Quentin Murrell (Marion County), S.C. 4-H State Teen Council secretary; Jordan Snipes (Jasper County), S.C. 4-H State Teen Council public relations; Haleigh Tomlin (Greenville County), S.C. 4-H State Teen Council legislative liaison; and Morgan Marlett (Greenville County), S.C. 4-H State Teen Council Upstate representative.

The 4-H'ers who attended were elected by their peers to State Teen Council. Advisors are Dawn Stuckey, Colleton County 4-H agent, and Katie Shaw, S.C. 4-H Specialist. "The name of their topic was 'Leadership through Adventure.' Their goal was to teach kids to improve communication skills in a group and develop leadership team-building skills," Shaw said.

The youth development arm of the Clemson Cooperative Extension Service, 4-H has more than 100,000 participants. The programs cover animal science, agriculture, science, engineering, natural resources, healthy living, leadership and more. 4-H uses a learn-by-doing approach built on the involvement of caring adults and the resources of Clemson University to help youth become productive members of society.

COTTON HARVESTING

Good cotton pickers sweep through a field cleanly, leaving a clear line between stripped stalks and unpicked bolls. Due to an extremely wet fall, some farmers are still trying to get the last of their cotton harvested.

USDA DESIGNATES 4 COUNTIES AS NATURAL DISASTER AREAS

Agriculture Secretary Sonny Perdue has designated four South Carolina counties as primary natural disaster areas. Producers who suffered losses due to excessive flooding and wind caused by Hurricane Florence that occurred Sept. 14 may be eligible for U.S. Department of Agriculture Farm Service Agency emergency loans.

This designation allows FSA to extend much-needed emergency credit to producers recovering from natural disasters. Emergency loans can be used to meet various recovery needs including the replacement of essential items such as equipment or livestock, reorganization of a farming operation or the refinance of certain debts.

Chesterfield, Dillon, Horry and Marlboro counties are eligible to apply for emergency loans. The deadline to apply is July 8, 2019. FSA will review the loans based on the extent of losses, security available and repayment ability.

FSA has a variety of additional programs to help farmers recover from the impacts of this disaster. FSA programs that do not require a disaster declaration include: Emergency Assistance for Livestock, Honeybees and Farm-Raised Fish Program; Emergency Conservation Program; Livestock Forage Disaster Program; Livestock Indemnity Program; Operating and Farm Ownership Loans; and the Tree Assistance Program.

Farmers may contact their local USDA service center for further information on eligibility requirements and application procedures. Additional information is available online at farmers.gov/recover.

LOCAL FFA MEMBERS AMONG TOPS IN NATION; PRESIDENT TRUMP PRAISED ORGANIZATION

INDIANAPOLIS – This year more than 69,000 members, supporters and guests attended the 91st National FFA Convention & Expo on October 24-27. The convention took place at multiple venues around the city, including the Indiana Convention Center, Bankers Life Fieldhouse and the Lucas Oil Stadium.

Throughout the week, South Carolina FFA members attended a career and college expo, met with representatives from agricultural companies from around the country, participated in leadership workshops, and competed in multiple Career and Leadership Development events. Overall, six South Carolina FFA teams earned a Silver emblem, while 13 teams earned a Bronze medal. In addition, a number of SC FFA members placed in the top in the nation.

- Dallas Nivens, Clover FFA, 3rd place individual in Forestry
- Kristin Gleaton & Hanna Williamson, Lexington County Technology Center, 3rd place in AgriScience Fair: Plant Systems

During the general session, Keith Cox, former SC FFA Executive Director, received the VIP Citation Award. "This award recognizes the dedicated individuals who contribute to the FFA mission of student success through their hard work and cooperation," said national FFA chief executive officer Mark Poeschl.

President Donald Trump spoke to about 10,000 FFA members and guests on the last day of the convention. "You are amazing people," Trump said. "Your time in the FFA, in the field, in the farm, in the land and in the classroom has not only prepared you for a stellar, great career in something you love, it's taught you essential truths about life and about the world in which we live. You know that success only comes through hard work and perseverance."

The week concluded with SC FFA President Erica Wearing attending a round-table luncheon with US Secretary of Agriculture Sonny Perdue. During the last day, 22 SC FFA members earned their American Degree, which is the highest degree achievable in the national organization.

The National FFA Organization provides leadership, personal growth and career success through agriculture education to the 669,989 student members who belong to one of the 8,630 local FFA chapters throughout the U.S., Puerto Rico and the U.S. Virgin Islands.

TREE SEEDLINGS AVAILABLE AT SPECIAL PRICING

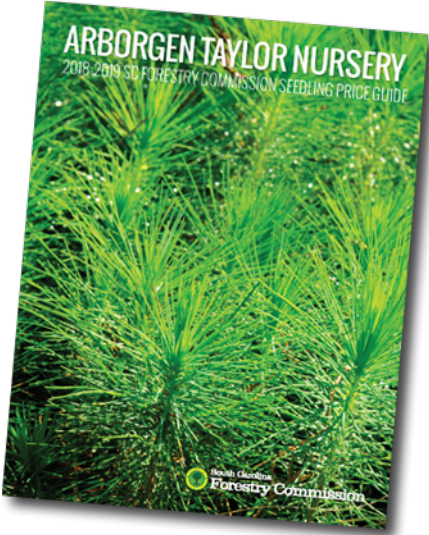

The South Carolina Forestry Commission is encouraging landowners to place their tree seedling orders for winter planting while they are still available.

ArborGen’s Taylor Nursery in Edgefield County has more than 600,000 seedlings left for sale at special landowner pricing for South Carolina residents. These seedlings include containerized, genetically improved longleaf pine and a variety of hardwoods. Among the remaining hardwoods are Sawtooth oak, Northern red oak, dogwood, persimmon and yellow poplar, not to mention Christmas tree selections.

“This is the first year that ArborGen has operated the Forestry Commission’s Taylor Nursery, and we’re excited about the win-win situation our partnership has created,” said Tim Adams, SCFC Resource Development Director.

“Landowners will benefit from being able to buy ArborGen’s genetics at Forestry Commission prices. ArborGen will also be able to expand production to help landowners, such as those replanting after Hurricane Michael. The Forestry Commission has negotiated special rates for South Carolina timberland owners.”

Download the ArborGen Taylor Nursery seedling price guide from the Forestry Commission’s website: trees.sc.gov/pubs/seedlingpriceguide2018.pdf

The purpose of the Forestry Commission’s seedling program is to provide a diverse selection of genetically improved seedlings to South Carolina landowners for timber and Christmas tree production as well as wildlife and wetland habitat improvements.

Contact Taylor Nursery at (803) 275-3578 to place an order, and be sure to ask for the Forestry Commission discount. The discounted prices will only apply to the first 100,000 seedlings ordered annually by each qualified landowner.

Landowners must plant the seedlings in South Carolina to be eligible for the discount. More information about the South Carolina Forestry Commission’s seedling sales program, species availability and pricing can be found on their website.

PROJECT CAN PROTECT THREATENED COASTAL BIRDS

Coastal bird populations face habitat loss, human disturbance, predation and sea level rise. An innovative public-private partnership needs to raise $1.2 million by Dec. 14 to address the problem in South Carolina.

Populations of many coastal bird species have declined by 70 percent during the last 60 years, and the Palmetto State is a critical link in preserving these birds. Crab Bank, one of five seabird sanctuaries owned by the SC Department of Natural Resources, has provided nesting habitat for as many as 5,000 birds in a single season, including colonies of brown pelicans, terns, black skimmers, egrets and herons, and American oystercatchers. Due to wave erosion and Hurricane Irma in 2017, all the available nesting habitat on Crab Bank was washed away.

A long-awaited dredging project to deepen the channel in Charleston Harbor holds the key to saving Crab Bank. Overseen by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, the “Post-45” Charleston Harbor Deepening Project could restore many as 80 acres with the dredged material. Crab Bank could provide 28 acres of nesting habitat.

“Crab Bank, if renourished, can produce hundreds of thousands of young birds over the next 50 years,” said SCDNR Wildlife Biologist Felicia Sanders.

The Coastal Bird Conservation Program has until December 2018 to raise the funds needed to help cost-share the renourishment of Crab Bank. The project has raised $340,000 so far.

BLANCHE’S BROWN RICE

BY BLANCHE WEATHERS

INGREDIENTS

- 2 cups rice
- 2 cans Beef Consommé soup
- 2 cans French Onion soup
- 1 ½ - 2 sticks real butter

DIRECTIONS

Place all ingredients in a 9 x 13" or similar size casserole. You can pour it all in and place butter in pats on top. Bake at 350 degrees for 45 minutes to 1 hour, until rice is done.

Do not scrimp on the butter. I use 2 sticks and everyone loves my rice!

PUMPKIN BREAD

Preheat oven to 350°. Line an 8“-x-4” loaf pan with parchment paper then grease with cooking spray or softened butter.

In a large bowl, whisk together flour, cinnamon, baking soda, baking powder, ginger, nutmeg, and salt.

In a separate large bowl using a hand mixer, beat melted butter, sugar, pumpkin puree, sour cream, eggs, and vanilla.

Gradually add dry ingredients to wet ingredients until just combined. Transfer batter to prepared pan.

Bake until a toothpick inserted into the center of the loaf comes out clean, about 50 minutes to 1 hour.

LAST CHANCE FOR ARC APPS

The final day for seed cotton producers to submit applications for the Agriculture Risk Coverage and Price Loss Coverage programs crop is December 7. Seed cotton is a covered commodity, replacing generic base acres.

Owners of a farm with generic base acres as of September 30, 2013, and a recent planting history of covered commodities, have a one-time opportunity to allocate generic base acres. If the entire process is not completed by the deadline, FSA will have no valid contract on file and there will be no possibility for program payments.

Farmers should call their local FSA offices immediately to complete the attribution, yield update, program election and enrollment process, or visit farmers.gov.

MERRY CHRISTMAS ALL YEAR LONG!

The Market Bulletin makes a thoughtful gift for Dad, Grandpa, Uncle Joe, or Aunt Thelma—or anyone else on your list who loves agriculture.

Just send in the form on Page 2, or go online to agriculture.sc.gov/market-bulletin to subscribe. Only $10 for 24 issues a year.
